HANDS-ON PARTNERSHIP

The relationship we have with our client-partners is the foundation of the Cambridge philosophy that has been proven to be fundamental to the success of a loss control plan.

The underlying hands-on philosophy evolved from our early history, nearly 50 years ago, as a pioneer in the self-insurance industry. Our success has been a consequence of our goal-directed, client-focused approach in bringing loss control expertise to our client-partners. This feature has become one of the hallmarks that distinguish Cambridge from other loss control service providers.

QUALITY AND EXPERIENCE

Over the past 15 years, the impacts of societal influences and increased regulatory demands have significantly altered the traditional needs of our clients. To address this new orientation, we have implemented internal continuous improvement measures to ensure that our client-partners receive state-of-the-art consultation on the safety and health issues that affect their specific business. This focus on quality service has enhanced our ability to respond quickly, effectively and professionally to our clients from a range of industries.

THE CAMBRIDGE VALUE

In calculating the value of loss control, many consider only the cost of the potential for reduction in loss control. While that's reason enough to invest in Cambridge's Loss Control Services, the true value we bring extends beyond the bottom line. Our recommendations also enhance productivity and employee relations, increase employee awareness and reduce apprehension created by workplace hazards. Combined, the benefits of a well-implemented loss control program can be substantial.
